Key Facts on Gender-based violence

16 Days to Overcome Gender-Based Violence
Key Facts on Gender-Based Violence

- Gender-based violence (GBV) includes any type of threat or violence committed against a person because of their sex or gender identity.

- GBV can be physical, psychological, emotional, or sexual, and may take the form of deprivation of resources and access to services.

- Though GBV manifests differently in different regions of the world, no country is immune.

- Statistics from the UN Women (United Nations entity for Women) highlight the scale of the problem:
• 1 in 3 women and girls experience physical or sexual violence in their lifetime.
• Approximately 15 million adolescent girls worldwide have experienced rape or other forced sexual acts.
• Data from 30 countries shows that only 1% of those girls ever sought help.
• Of the 87,000 women intentionally killed in 2017, 50%-58% (137 women a day) were murdered by current or former intimate partners or by family members.
• In the majority of countries with available data, less than 40% of the women who experience violence seek help of any sort.
• It is estimated that there are 650 million women and girls in the world today who were married before the age of 18.
• According to data from 2018, girls and women together represent 72% of all human trafficking victims, mostly used for forced sexual activity.
• 2019 data shows that at least 200 million women and girls have undergone female genital mutilation (FGM), with the majority of cases performed on girls under five years old.
• An estimated 130 million girls worldwide remain out of school.
COVID-19 has exacerbated pre-existing gender inequalities. The loss of household income and protracted school closures may also place adolescent girls at an increased risk of child marriage.
On a more positive note:

• At least 144 countries have passed laws on domestic violence, and 154 nations have laws on sexual harassment.

• There was a steady decline in child marriage before the COVID-19 pandemic.

• Between 2010 and 2018, child marriages in East Asia dropped from 49% to 30%.

• The World Economic Forum in 2018 noted that in North Africa, the percentage has dropped by about half, from 34% to 13%, over the past three decades.
