

LWF - Iraq

During the conflict against the Islamic State from 2014 to 2019, almost 6 million people were displaced. This led to a humanitarian crisis especially affecting Iraq's most vulnerable people and minorities. In the country since 2014, LWF Iraq has been providing humanitarian assistance to internally displaced people (IDPs), refugees, and host communities. With the end of the active conflict, the country program has moved from a relief to an early recovery and development approach. In 2019, LWF Iraq supported more than 26,000 people. Registered with the federal Iraqi authorities and in Kurdistan, LWF is based in Duhok and currently operates in the Dohuk, Nineveh and Erbil governates.

Our work

Since 2014, LWF Iraq has built up a track record in three programmatic areas: Livelihoods, Quality Services (WASH), and Protection & Social Cohesion. So far, the approach has been predominantly humanitarian, but LWF Iraq seeks increasingly to move from relief to early recovery and development, to be able to support the returnees and affected host communities in rebuilding their lives. LWF Iraq ensures a rights-based, gender responsive and climate sensitive approach, focusing on local capacity building and ensuring meaningful participation of vulnerable and minority groups with an emphasis on protection and social cohesion.

Voices from the field

Jihan, 22, was born and raised in Sinjar and following displacement from her area of origin, she is now living in Dohuk. She recently completed the "Alternative to Violence Project" (AVP) training. The approach is at the basis of LWF's social cohesion and peace building programs in Iraq. Jihan can now proudly call herself an AVP facilitator. "Everything I have learned has an impact on various situations I go through. It has helped me to know who I truly am, and to try to solve problems and rivalries in my community in the best possible way. The training has opened my mind" she explains. Through the local AVP network in Duhok and beyond, Jihan will help train and inspire others committed to non-violent solution of conflicts and peaceful coexistence.
