

LWF - Jordan

The Syria crisis, now in its tenth year, has left millions displaced from their homes, seeking refuge from the violence of war. As of March 2020, Jordan is officially hosting 671,579 registered Syrian refugees, although the total number of Syrian refugees in the country is thought to be more than double. In Jordan since 2012, the Lutheran World Federation (LWF) responds to the crisis, assisting Syrian and Iraqi refugees and vulnerable local communities. In 2019, the country program supported more than 45,000 individuals through protection and social cohesion, livelihoods, and quality services, primarily in education. Based in Amman, LWF Jordan is operating in the three northern governorates Irbid, Zarqa and Mafraq, in the communities and in Za'atari camp, supporting refugees and vulnerable Jordanians.

Our work

Since the opening of the program in 2012, LWF Jordan has built up a track record in three programmatic areas: Livelihoods, Quality Services (Education) and Protection & Social Cohesion, targeting Syrian and Iraqi refugees and vulnerable Jordanians. For the period of 2019-2024 and in line with its country strategy, LWF Jordan aims to economically empower and increase the resilience of vulnerable and marginalized households and communities by increasing market-based, transferable, safe and sustainable income generation opportunities, particularly for women and youth.

Voices from the field

Ten-year-old Bayan was born with cerebral palsy, and spent her first three school years in a school exclusively for children with disabilities.

Today, she attends fourth grade at the Al Yarmouk Primary Mixed School in Amman, Jordan. The school was rehabilitated by LWF Jordan, as part of a four-year program aimed at building improved learning environments for children. "When we think of children with disabilities, I believe we are often focused on being sympathetic and empathic. We just need to include them as human beings," explains English teacher Abeer Shahin. Although it has taken her some time to find her place, Bayan likes her new class: "I like most of the subjects here at school," she says, "Physical Education, Religion, and English." Al Yarmouk Primary Mixed Schools is one of 175 schools where LWF Jordan has worked on improving the physical and social learning environment for Syrian, Iraqi and Jordanian children.
